MMA Commentator Ron Yacovetti Joins Tuff-N-Uff
“The Yacman” Signs With the Vegas-based Martial Arts Promotion

LAS VEGAS, NV – APRIL 5, 2012 – Ron “The Yacman” Yacovetti is bringing his play-by-play services to Tuff-N-Uff, a premier amateur mixed martial arts promotion based in Las Vegas, Nev., for its 2012 broadcast year.

“When amateurs get to showcase their skills in the fight capital of the world against some of the toughest competition out there, you know it’s going to be an exciting show,” Ron said. “Tuff-N-Uff continues to impress the fans and I’m honored to be part of their team.”

Ron’s first appearance is on Saturday, April 7 at “The Fist-ival” in Las Vegas’s South Point Arena, which is set to feature four championship bouts and a total of 16 fights. This one-of-a-kind event will also include live music, beer sampling, and gourmet food.

“We received such positive feedback for our January event at South Point that we decided to do it again – only this time we’re doing it even bigger and better,” said Barry Meyer, Tuff-N-Uff president. “It’s going to be a party you don’t want to miss!”

Ron previously appeared on a Tuff-N-Uff broadcast almost exactly two years ago in March 2010, calling the stalemate match between Sean Bollinger and Ryan Couture, the son of Captain America himself.

Since March 2012, The Yacman has commentated for several MMA promotions throughout the United States and Canada, including on-air pairings with Maurice “Mo” Smith, Jens “Little Evil” Pulver, and Chael Sonnen.
